

HSGER 101

COURSE LEARNING OUTCOMES

1. Demonstrate an understanding of historical and current issues that confront the human population in today's world.
2. Document the differing issues that effect a person from childhood into later adulthood.
3. Document current events and their impact on the aging community, younger adults, and children.
4. Demonstrate solid critical thinking by evaluating and proposing alternative care models for elders, children, and teens in need.
5. Document a strong and effective plan for your own development into later adulthood.
6. Participate in a community or international effort that addresses gerontology policy efforts. The focus will be directed towards intergenerational activities.
