Course Learning Outcomes

By the end of this course, a student should be able to:

— Improve their understanding of the fundamental problems of philosophy -- human nature and the human condition, the meaning of life, determinism and freedom, the relationship of mind and body, knowledge of the world, God, the existence of souls, the nature of morality, etc.
— Improve their ability to analyze, criticize, and construct arguments, and to evaluate theories for logical consistency and coherence.
— Improve their ability to identify metaphysical presuppositions underlying various worldviews.
— Evaluate real life problems from a philosophical perspective, and improve their ability to reason their way towards just solutions.
